State colours for teacher on ANZAC tour

Hamilton Senior High School teacher Rosinda Seara is one step closer to a life-changing tour to the Western Front, after receiving her official black and gold Premier's ANZAC Student Tour uniform from Education Minister Liz Constable.

The Head of Society and Environment, who also won the Premier's Teacher of the Year in 2008, is one of four teachers and 12 secondary students from across Western Australia who will be travelling to France and Belgium this April, in what has become a popular history education program in the State.

Dr Constable said the students and teachers would pay tribute to the 18,000 soldiers who died at the Western Front, but whose remains have never been found.

"One of the many historic sites the tour group will visit will be Fromelles, where a mass grave of previously missing British and Australian soldiers has recently been found and will soon be recovered," Dr Constable said.

"The Western Front forms a crucial part of Australian history, contributed greatly to the ANZAC legend and has significant links to many Western Australian families.

"As occurred during the Gallipoli campaign, Australia was to experience more loss of human life on the Western Front. However, the Australian experience on the Western Front also helped change the course of the war and shape our Nation.

"The place names of Western Front battles, such as Fromelles, Pozieres and Villers Bretonneux, have now become as important in commemoration as they were in conflict.

"The students on the Premier's ANZAC Student Tour will have an opportunity to walk in the footsteps of the 313,000 Australian soldiers who fought at the front."

Dr Constable said Ms Seara was a passionate history teacher who had extensive experience in interstate and overseas school tours. After taking part in the 2008 Premier's ANZAC Student Tour as a teacher supervisor, she was asked to take part again as Deputy Tour Leader.

"From this tour I hope to gain a sense of empathy and the confidence to talk about the places that until last year were only names in a History text," Ms Seara said.

"Nothing prepares you for the emotion when you actually stand where the ANZACs fought and died.

"Taking part in the tour will make me a more passionate and more knowledgeable teacher of history, especially regarding the Australian experience in the western Front. I am looking forward to sharing the experiences with the students who will accompany us on the tour as well as future history students that I will be teaching in the years to come.”

In addition to meeting the Minister last Tuesday, the 2009 Premier’s ANZAC Student Tour participants and the Department of Education and Training Director General Sharyn O’Neill attended morning tea with the WA Governor Dr Ken Michael AC, which was followed by lunch with RSL representatives at ANZAC House.

To secure her place on the tour, Meghan had to complete a 1,000 word essay about the importance of ANZAC Day commemorations. Finalists then presented a five-minute speech on the topic and were interviewed by a panel of judges.
